Transnational Muslim Politics: Reimagining the Umma (Routledge Research in Transnationalism) By Peter G. Mandaville

This book analyzes Islam as a form of 'travelling theory' in the context of contemporary global transformations such as diasporic communities, transnational social movements, global cities and information technologies. Peter Mandaville examines how 'globalization' is manifested as lived experience through a discussion of debates over the meaning of Muslim identity, political community and the emergence of a 'critical Islam'.

This radical book argues that translocal forces are leading the emergence of a wider Muslim public sphere. Now available in paperback, it contains a new preface setting the debates in the context of September 11th.

Editorial Review

Review

"To my mind, Mandaville offers an accessible critical reading of a great swath of contemporary theory on diaspora and traveling culture and shows how empirical research inflected by this thinking can be conducted. That his book most resonates with post-September 11 discussions...is, I think, testimony to the richness of his analysis. It deserves a paperback version.."
